and wider screen sector. This role will attract someone active and experienced in the industry who can broaden our students' creative outlook and engage them with new and diverse perspectives on game development and production. They will have an ability to teach game development courses and contribute to other related courses within the Bachelor of Screen Arts with Honours (BSA Hons). The BSA (Hons) is an evolution of the highly successful Bachelor of Creative Media Production. The position requires acumen and excitement for innovative tertiary curriculum development and course leadership.

It is suitable to someone who will embrace strong relationships with both students and colleagues. The successful candidate will have a post-graduate qualification, and/or significant industry experience. They will value originality and difference, diversity and inclusion, and be passionate about guiding the next generation of game developers.

This is a three-year, fixed-term appointment.

Ko Wai Mātou?
