The Department of Painting and Drawing at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago is an open and pluralistic community of artists with a strong commitment to painting and drawing's various discourses and histories, and to experimentation. The collection of the Art Institute of Chicago is the highlight of the Department's curricular fieldwork. The department has a diverse faculty of more than 70 working artists.

Further information about the department can be found at: <https://www.saic.edu/painting-drawing>

Responsibilities

Comics faculty in the Department of Painting and Drawing will develop and teach courses related to comics, graphic novels, and visual storytelling. Comics studio courses will teach various techniques while covering topics such as the history of comics, as well as its prehistory in the caricature, the analysis of graphic narratives, the work of specific creators, and the cultural significance of the medium.

Tenure-track faculty will teach a range of undergraduate, post-baccalaureate, and graduate-level classes within the Department of Painting and Drawing, including working with MFA students on a tutorial basis. In some cases, a faculty member may also occasionally teach in collaboration with other departments within the context of an interdisciplinary art school. The faculty member will take a leadership role in forging the development of a comics curriculum both in the department and in partnership with others across the school. The faculty member will participate in student advising, admissions events, committee work, and special projects in the department; contribute to the SAIC community through ongoing curricular development; coordination of the MFA Comics pathway, and participate in departmental administration and school governance.

Qualifications

A terminal degree with in-depth practice in comics, graphic novels, and visual storytelling is required. This may include analyzing the history, theory, and cultural impact of comics, as well as the work of specific artists or genres. A minimum of two years of teaching experience or its equivalent and a significant record of publishing, exhibitions and related professional activities are required. The ideal candidate will contribute to the diversity of the School by bringing a perspective, way of thinking, and/or a unique set of experiences that expand the intellectual conversations and practices in the field. We seek candidates with the knowledge and aptitude to teach and mentor students from diverse backgrounds. Candidates should demonstrate their experience with, or aptitude for, departmental administration as service will be expected.
