CAAD has established a reputation as a leader in design education and study at top graduate programs and have established themselves as experts in creative industries across the globe, ranked globally in the Art and Design subject area by QS World University Subject Rankings (2024).

CAAD offers five undergraduate programs leading to degrees in architecture, interior design, visual communication design, and urban planning, along with a Master of Urban Planning. All positions come with a competitive salary and an attractive benefits package inclusive of free housing and transportation, annual return airfare, school tuition for dependents and health insurance. Successful candidates are expected to have a strong academic and professional background.

The successful candidate will primarily teach courses in the Bachelor of Science in Design Management degree program in the following areas: creative strategy and execution, design thinking, design research, strategic storytelling, user experience design, and innovation ecosystems. A terminal degree (MFA or PhD) in design management or a related area is required, along with a minimum of five years of academic and professional experience.

In addition to teaching, faculty are required to mentor students, engage in scholarly activities (which can include publishing, presenting at conferences, and service activities for the college, university and community).
