The chosen candidate will be an important part of the Drawing area dedicated to equipping students with competency in core discipline-specific skills while creatively expanding their potential.

We are seeking an energetic, collaborative, and curious studio artist and educator who is actively engaged in their field. The successful candidate will be expected to merge rigorous pedagogy with innovative teaching methodologies that stimulate critical thinking and creative exploration. Teaching assignments will be based on the individual's areas of expertise, with opportunities to engage with allied fields and interdisciplinary practices across the School of Art and may include occasional sections in our Foundations program. We seek candidates with a strong foundation in drawing along with a dedication to expanding the technical and conceptual direction of the discipline. We encourage applicants who can address both historical and contemporary art practices while fostering interdisciplinary cross-campus relationships and engaging with the vibrant local and regional art communities.

In addition to teaching, the candidate will be involved in conducting research, engaging in creative and scholarly activities, mentoring students, and contributing to departmental service. The role includes designing graduate and undergraduate courses, developing new curriculum materials, and staying current with shifts in the field. We value candidates who demonstrate a commitment to creating an inclusive learning environment and who can contribute to the positive studio culture both in and outside the classroom. The successful candidate will also have opportunities to participate in professional organizations and support the broader mission of the department and university.

Regular, reliable, and non-disruptive attendance is an essential job duty, as is the ability to create and maintain collegial, harmonious working relationships with others.

About the Drawing and Painting Areas:

While this position is specifically rooted in the Drawing area, opportunities exist to engage with other allied fields within and beyond the School of Art. Specifically, the newly completed Windgate Studio + Design Center allows for new opportunities and greater synthesis between the Drawing and Painting areas now occupying the entirety of the top floor. The Drawing and Painting areas at the University of Arkansas School of Art are centered on rigorous investigation that deploys complex skill sets in innovative and challenging directions. The curriculum develops technical proficiency as well as familiarity with historical and contemporary approaches. Course offerings range from those which explore perceptual skills to those that creatively expand what drawing and painting can be. Students develop a rich sensibility through an individualized artistic practice and exposure to a robust visiting artist program. The Drawing and Painting areas offer an energetic artistic community committed to equipping students to become active shapers of the future of the field.
